HOOP DE DOODEN DO.

A FASHIONABLE BALLAD.

Me go to a ball de oder night,
De room wid gas was blazing bright,
De gals were drest in de fashion's hight,
Wid de Hoop de dooden do.

Dere air-tubes dey were so blown out,
Each Miss was as good as a mile about,
De leanest figure she look stout,
In de Hoop de dooden do.

But dere was one dey call de Belle,
As big as Ben afore he fell,
O Golly! she were such a swell,
In de Hoop de deeden doo.

Her dress was white, her sash was red,
She wore a bucket* on her head,
Her neck look like de garden bed—
*Hoop de dooden do.

She stretch so far from left to right,
She cover up a sofy quite,
She put six chairs clean out of sight,
Wid de Hoop de dooden doo.

I ask dis gal to hab a dance,
But soon as we began to prance,
The Crinnylean stop our advance;
Hoop de dooden doo.

De garment which dey call de skirt,
It trail behind to ketch the dirt,
It trip me up, it gib me hurt;
Hoop de dooden do.

When I get up de truth I tell her,
Says I, 'Miss you'll excuse a fella,
But I can't dance wid de big umbrella!'
Hoop de dooden do.

At dis my joke I laugh Yup! Yup!
She look as though she eat me up,
So den I take her down to sup
In her Hoop de dooden doo.

MORAL.

Now, gals, if you at parties show,
And in de dance would shake de toe,
Not like balloons but ladies go,

You tink de Crinnylean de ting,
But your partners it to grief do bring,

Dis child you see he lub to feel
Soft flesh and blood, not bone and steel,

OUR QUEEN OF MAY.

BY FLORENCE GREY.

Never had there been a merrier May day in Lindengrove. Spring had come in two weeks earlier than it was ever known before, and already the violets and buttercups smiled in the meadows, and the May roses were blooming through the woods — The blue houstonia studded the uplands;—looking out from amid the springing grass like stars reflected from deep waters. Wild strawberries were blossoming. The leaves, too, were every where on the trees. The honey-suckle was already peeping out, along the edges of woods; and the geranium blushed in modest beauty, like a young virgin at the thought of love.

Just back of the village was a sylvan glade, the prettiest spot in the world for a festival! A natural lawn, enclosed on three sides by noble woods, and opening on the fourth side to the south thickly carpeted with grass, was the place where, time out of mind, our May parties had been held. A rampart of rocks ran along the western side of the glade, covered at this season with glowing columbines. On the opposite side the ground sloped down into the wood, through which ran a babbling brook, quite out of sight; but the music of its waters, like the laughter of happy children, came ever to the ear, soothing the soul with its sweet, sylvan music.

'Who shall be our May Queen?' was the question we asked of each other.

'Oh! Lilly Lane!' was the almost universal response of the younger members of the party.

'I should think we might make a better selection,' said Susan Crampton, the squire's daughter, and the richest heiress Lindengrove could boast. 'Who is Lily Lane?'

Now Susan Crampton knew well enough who Lily Lane was Had not everybody in the village heard the poor orphan's story, and pitied her for her loneliness and destitution? Lily Lane was the only child of a couple who had once been in comfortable, good circumstances; but the father had become a bankrupt in some season of great mercantile disaster, and had fled to our village to hide his shame, and eke out a miserable pittance for his family. Misfortune proved too much for Mr. Lane, and he soon died; his wife followed him in less than a year of broken heart. Poor Lily Lane, the cherished pet of luxury, was thus thrown on the world, a penniless orphan. But God feedeth the young ravens, and he raised up friends for the homeless girl. A humble widow, who had known sorrow—where else is pity found but among the poor and bruised in heart?—took Lily to her home, and the two together now earned a decent livelihood by doing needle-work for their neighbors, and Lily even went out sometimes as a mantua-maker!

You would have thought Lily ill-fitted for the wear and tear of a life like this, for she was as fragile and delicate as the flower from which she was named. She was slowly killing herself, there was no doubt of that! All winter she had been harrassed by a cough, and she often complained of a pain in her side; the doctor had told her she must give up sewing; but what could she do? Lily could not see the kind old widow suffer for her sake, so she worked on, saying as little about her illness as possible; but often, she would go away alone by herself, and cry bitterly, when she remembered the comforts she once possessed, and thought how lonely life was, now that her mother lay in the village church yard.

Lily had cause for her tears arising from other sources. There were hard hearts in Lindengrove, as well as elewhere; and sometimes, in following her vocation, she was subjected to insults that made her almost wish herself dead. Susan Crampton had once employed her, and it was with a beating heart that Lily had gone to the mansion of the haughty Cramptons. Little did she dream of what she was to suffer there! She was shown into a cold room, and left to wait nearly two hours without her breakfast; then, when the family had finished their meal, she was sent down to the kitchen to eat with the insolent menial. Poor Lily had never been treated thus, and the food remained untasted before her.

Proud, contemptuous, and thoroughly selfish was Susan Crampton; but she veiled her bad qualities under an air of high breeding, and as she was accomplished and handsome, besides being wealthy, not every one knew her real character. To her equals, she was studiously polite; to those but little her inferiors, she was condescending; but her haughtiness revenged itself on all, who, like Lily Lane, were poor and in sorrow. That she should associate with such a person, was not to be supposed, and, when, therefore, Lily Lane was proposed for May Queen, the indignation of the imperious heiress was beyond bounds.

On ordinary occasions, so great is the power of wealth, Susan Crampton might have carried her point, and been chosen May Queen, as she secretly desired; but the election had always been the exclusive right of the school children, and with these little dears no one was so popular as Lily Lane. So the choice was decided by acclamation, and Lily was duly crowned.—The most Susan Crampton could do was to curl her lip, and keep herself and her set as much as possible aloof from Lily; and you may be sure she did this effectually.

'A servant girl, who works for me at half a dollar a day, to be May Queen!—Humph!' and she tossed her head.

The truth was, Susan Crampton had set her heart on being May Queen, because her brother had promised to ride up from the city, and bring with him his friend Harry Villiers. Now Harry was from one of the best families of the state—rich, handsome, and quite talented; and it had long been the wish of Susan Crampton to become a partner of his fortune and reputation.—However, when Harry did at length come, and she found herself hanging on his arm, and receiving his flattering attentions, she forgot her vexation. It was so delicious to have all the girls envying her!

'Who is that pretty creature they have made Queen of May?' said Harry, suddenly, for the first time catching sight of Lily.

'Some low creature, I scarcely know who,' replied Susan Crampton, coloring with jealousy and vexation. 'I believe she goes out as a seamstress, and that she once did some work for us, but I saw little of her, as she ate, of course, with the servants, and sat up stairs by herself.'

Susan Crampton scarcely knew what to make of the broad stare with which Mr. Villiers regarded her; and she was even more puzzled at his words. 'She's very pretty,' he said 'poor thing!'

'Has she no parents?' said; Harry, after a pause.

'None. They died some years ago.—She would have had to go to the poor-house, but for Mrs. Hampton, who took her in,' said Susan Crampton, fancying she was revenging herself effectually on Lily by these words. 'For my part, I think she must be a mean spirited creature, to remain a tax on a poor old widow.'

Again Harry honored his fair companion with a stare, and this time it showed such unmistakable surprise, that Susan Crampton began to think she had spoken too bitterly. She colored, therefore, and was silent. It had never until this moment occurred to her that one so high born as Villiers could by any possibility think twice of a girl in Lily Lane's condition of life.

But Harry Villiers was above prejudices of this kind He believed in nature's nobility, and no other; and there was that in the sweet face of our Lily which attracted him toward her as to a kindred spirit.—Hitherto, Villiers, without being deeply in love with Susan Crampton, had been pleased with her beauty and attracted by her accomplishments; but had his fancy been ten times more struck with her than it was, her undisguised malignity, in speaking of Lily Lane, would have destroyed every spark of esteem for her. He had never before suspected his fair companion of having a bad heart, so adroitly had her lady-like manners concealed foibles; but fortunately there is a difference between true and conventional politeness, the one springs from the heart and never fails, while the other, being only an assumed nature, sooner or later betrays itself.

'Do introduce me to you pretty May Queen!' said Harry Villiers, half an hour later, to old Mr. Seward. 'She's perfectly beautiful.'

'And good as she is handsome,' said the gratified old man, with whom she was quite a favorite. 'You don't know Lily Lane, then?'

'What a sweet name,' said Harry abstractedly; then he added more coherently 'had she worthless parents?'

'Lord bless you, no!' said the old man; and as Lily was just then dancing and an introduction impossible until the set was concluded, he favored his hearer with a history of Mr. Lane's misfortunes which effectually enlisted Harry's sympathies.

There are some faces we meet which appear like familiar ones, just as if they had been those of some dear friend, in a former state of existence. The idea is pretty, tho' fanciful, and I, for one, am not to be laughed out of it, because folks may call me platonic. You and I, dear reader, have both seen such faces, riveting our attention at once, and possessing a charm we can neither explain nor resist. Such a face Harry felt Lily Lane's to be! It haunted him like the faces of the angels he had dreamed of when a child. He was surprised to find her so entertaining a companion; for Lily was not only sprightly, but really cutting, and her soul was full of most glorious poetry. Not every one could, on so short an acquaintance, have drawn her out; but there was a frank cordiality about Harry that set her immediately at ease. Lily was only seventeen, and very bashful; but she soon felt as if she had known Harry for years. She talked of the flowers, of which her listener was as fond as herself; she talked of poetry, and was delighted to find her favorite authors were Harry's; she talked of music, which he, too, admired; and all this while there was such a joyousness in her words and tone, there was so much of the heart, such child-like purity and earnestness, it was like a bright humming bird skimming from flower to flower. Harry was delighted and entranced. There was such a freshness about all Lily said, that he gazed at her in wonder and fascination. He thought he had never heard anything like the music of her voice—it was as gleesome as the song of the first robin in spring—it thrilled through him with a feeling of ecstatic delight. We know not how it is, but there are some voices that have this power, as if all the love, and sweetness, and purity of the heart are melted to music. Perhaps God wisely made it thus, that we might recognize the angels!

The rage of Susan Crampton was so great at seeing the attentions which Villiers paid to our Lily, that it required all her self-command to conceal her chagrin, nor was she wholly successful. Her ill-humor betrayed itself on several occasions, but neither Villiers nor Lily saw this, for they were, for the rest of that day, all in all to each other.

'Good-bye, Miss Crampton,' said Villiers, his face glowing with happiness, as he passed her on his way to escort Lily home. 'What a delightful place Lindengrove is for a May party!'

Susan Crampton drew herself up and returned a stiff bow; but she took no notice of Lily, who colored at her insolence.

It was strange how often Harry Villiers visited our village after the May party, and it was equally wonderful that he always went straight to the widow's cottage. On Susan Crampton he called occasionally. The heiress no longer mentioned Lily's name, but did her best to please her visitor. And certainly if the exercise of considerable powers of fascination could be relied on to ensure success, she was in a fair way even yet to supplant Lily Lane, and become the envied bride of Henry Villiers.

'That girl shall never be his, with her milk and water face,' she said passionately to herself. 'I will drive her from the village first.'

The threat, thus muttered, Susan Crampton soon proceeded to put into execution. All at once work began to grow scarce with Lily. A protege of Susan Crampton's suddenly became popular, for this rival of Lily's having come from town, her styles were soon exclusively in repute.—Poor Lily found the best branch of her business taken from her, and many were the bitter tears shed at the prospect of her coming want; for the plain sewing of the widow with whom she boarded would barely support one of them, and all Lily's customers, except one or two whom the mandate of the heiress could not effect, had long deserted her.

What rendered the chances of success greater for Susan Crampton, was the absense of Henry Villiers, who had gone to the west on business, which was expected to detain him several months. He had departed without declaring his love to Lily. This was another sore trouble for our heroine. Lily had been ignorant of her own feelings until the absence of Villiers revealed them to her; and now she often feared, as even Mrs. Hampton daily asserted, that he would never return.—There was, amid all the darkness, one little bit of sunshine for Lily. On the last evening he had spent with her, Villiers, at parting, had left a locket in her hand as he pressed it, and had whispered in her ear that she would be the first person he would call to see on his return. Lily remembered the very look and tone with which he spoke; and whenever she recalled them to memory, her heart beat quicker, and the blush came to her cheek, even though she buried it on her snowy, yet humble pillow. She could not believe that Harry Villiers, who seemed all nobleness and truth, could deceive her.

One day Lily received a letter from a distant relative of her mother, to whom that parent had written a few days before her death. Many circumstances, the writer said, had prevented a reply sooner.—The purpose of the present epistle was to offer a home to our heroine. The real nature of this offer was partially disguised, but Lily had already learned enough of the selfishness of the world to be able to interpret the cold compliments of her aunt as they deserved, and to detect the real character of her expected position in the family which was that of governess. A year before, Lily would have rejected the offer; but now she felt herself in duty bound to accept it, as it left her a door by which to escape being any longer a burden to kind Mrs. Hampton.

Susan Crampton heralded with delight how chance had favored her plans. Her dreaded rivals once removed, and living in seclusion at the extreme end of the country—for Lily's aunt lived quite in another section of the Union—there would be no obstacle, she thought, to the accomplishment of her own ambitious purpose.

'He will never follow the girl,' she said 'His fancy is only pleased with her, and when he comes back he will have quite forgotten her. Then, having her no longer as a rival, he will become entangled with me before he knows it. At any rate, if I do fail, I shall have my revenge in her not getting him, for I feel satisfied the creature loves him.'

It was the evening before Lily's departure. Her trunk was packed, she had bid farewell to the few friends left her, and now she had retired to the little porch behind the house where all alone she might indulge her grief. Though she had endured many slights while following her vocation in the village, she had received many kindnesses, and been not wholly friendless; but now she was going among strangers, and might be called on to bear still greater insults. Well might she weep then! But this was not all. She was about to leave a place endeared to her by associations of Villiers, whom she still loved, in despite of the secret schooling of her heart; she might not, nay! would never see him again. No wonder she wept so bitterly. In that very porch they had often sat together. Now he was away, perhaps regardless of her, rich, courted and happy; while she was going out among cold-hearted strangers, to earn in tears, the bread which even then would be grudged to her as if it were alms. Hot tears rained down her cheeks and trinkled through her fingers—poor, orphan girl!

'Lily—dear Lily,' said a soft voice behind her.

The affrighted girl started up with a beating heart, and brushing the tears hastily from her eyes, gazed on the speaker.—Could he be Villiers? The tone was his, but he had gone away for six months, and three had scarcely past!

'Dear Lily,' continued Villiers, for it was he, 'why these tears? I have come back to tell you how much I love you, and ask you to be my little wife; and I find you weeping as if your heart would break. What is it, Lily?'

She looked up earnestly into his face, as if to say, 'you would not deceive a poor orphan, would you?' and reading only love and truth in those full dark orbs that looked so tenderly into her own, she hid her face sobbing on Villiers' bosom and wept uncontrolably.

Lily's trunk was unpacked, and the village was astounded next day with the intelligence that she was to marry Harry Villiers. Everything came out, folks said, as pretrily as in a romance. Harry had conceived the project of buying and furnishing a country house, before he asked Lily to be his wife; so he had given out that he was going west, when in reality he went up the Hudson, and picked out one of the prettiest estates in the world.

Not far above Poughkeepsie there is a sweet English cottage, peeping out from a perfect bower of trees. There dwells our still lovely Lily, now a happy mother.

Susan Crampton is destined to be an old maid, or else to be married for her wealth; at least, so say the gossips of the village.

CORRECTING A FAULT.

'Well, Sarah, I declare! you are the worst girl I know of in the whole country!'

'Why, mother! what have I done?'

'See there! how you have spilled water in my pantry! get out of my sight; I cannot bear to look upon you—you careless girl!'

'Well mother! I could'nt help it.'

Mrs. A., the mother, is a very worthy woman, but very ignorant of the art of a family government. Sarah, her daughter, is a heedless girl of ten years. She is very much disposed to remove things out of their proper places, and seldom stops to put them in again. On the occasion referred to above she had been seen to put water into a tea-kettle, and had very carelessly spilled a considerable portion of it on the pantry-floor. After the above conversation, which, on the part of the mother, sounded most like successive claps of thunder on the ears of her daughter, Sarah escaped in a ponting manner, into an adjoining room, and her mother wiped up the slops in the pantry.

Well, thought I, my dear Mrs. A., if that is the way you treat your daughter, you will probably find it necessary to wipe after her a great many times more, if you both live Such family government, as here set forth seems to me to be liable to several serious objections.

The reproof was too boisterous. Children can never be frightened into a knowledge of error, or into conviction of crime. It is their judgment, and their taste for neatness and order, which need training, and not their ears.

It was too unreasonable. The child was, indeed, careless; but she had done nothing to merit the title of 'the worst girl in the country.' Children are sensible of injustice, and very soon find it difficult to respect those who unjustly treat them.

It was too passionate. The mother seemed to be boiling over with displeasure and disgust, and, under this excitement, she despised her darling child; the very same that in a very short time afterwards, when the storm had blown by, she was ready to embrace in her arms an almost the very image of perfection.

It was inefficient. Sarah retired under the idea that her mother was excited for a very little thing, which she could not help. Thus she blamed her mother and acquitted herself.

Mrs. B., is another mother in the same neighborhood. Mrs. A. wonders why Mrs. B has so very good children. Says Mrs. A 'I talk a great deal more to my children than Mrs B. does, I frequently scold them most severely, and I sometimes whip them, until I think they will never disobey me again. And yet, how noisy, careless, disobedient my children are! Mrs. B says but little to her children, and yet her family move like clock-work Order, neatness, and harmony abound, and I never heard of her whipping them at all.' 'Tis even so! And I should like to tell Mrs. A. the grand cause of her failure. She has not yet learned to govern herself, and it is not therefore surprising that her family is poorly governed.

Mrs. B. has a daughter, Catherine, about the same age with the daughter of Mrs. A. Not long since Catherine committed, in a hurry, the same set of carelessness as above related, and Mrs. B's treatment of it reveals her secret of family-government.

'Catherine, my daughter, can you tell me how this water came on the floor?'

'I suppose, mother, I must have spilled it a few moments ago, when I filled the tea-kettle.'

'Why did you not wipe it up, my daughter?'

'I intended to return, and do so; but, on getting engaged on something else I forgot it.'

'Well my daughter, when you do wrong, you should try to repair it, to the best of your ability, and as soon as possible. Get the mop and wipe it up, and try not to do so again.'

Catherine immediately does as she is bid; remarking, 'I will try and be more careful another time.'

Mrs. A. may be found in almost every community. Mrs. B., though perhaps a more rare personage, yet graces many families in our land.

FUN WITH THE F'S.

The fellow who fixed up the following fun (says the Augusta Constitutionalist) should find fortune in some faultless female friends forever, fuel for his fire and food and fodder for his flat flooted and four-footed forces:

FUN WITH THE F'S.—A famous fish factor found himself father of five flirting females: Fanny, Florence, Fernando, Francesca and Fenella. The first four were flat featured, ill-favored, forbidding faced, freckled frumas, fretful, flippant, foolish and flouncing. Fenella was a fine featured, fresh, fleet footed frank, free and full of fun. The fisher failed, and was forced by fickle fortune to forego his footman, forfeit his forefathers' fine field and find a forlorn farm house in a forsaken forest.—The four tretful females, fond of figuring at feasts in feathers and fashionably finery, fumed at their fugitive father. Forsaken by fulsome flattering fortune hunters, who followed them when first flourished, Fenella fondled her father, flavored their food, forgot her flattering followers, and frolicked in a frieze without flounces.—The father finding himself forced to forage in foreign parts for a fortune, found he could afford a faring to his five fondlings. The first four were fain to foster their frivolity with fine frills and fans, fit to finish their father's finances; Fenella, fearful of flooring him, formed a fancy for a full fresh flower. Fate favored the fish factor for a few days, when he fell in with a fog; Filey's footsteps faltered, and fool failed. He found himself in front of a fortified fortress. Finding it forsaken, and feeling himself feeble, and forlorn with fasting, he fed on the fish, flesh and fowl he found, fricassed, and when full, fell flat on the floor. Fresh in the forenoon, he forthwith flew to the fruitful fields, and not forgetting Fenella, he filched a fair flower; when a foul frightful fiendish figure dashed forth; Fellonious fellow fingering my flowers. I'll finish you; go say farewell to your fine felicious family, and face me in a fortnight. The faint hearted fisher fumed and faltered and last was far in his flight. His five daughters flew to fall at his feet and fervently felicitate him. Frantically and fluently he unfolded his fate. Fenella, forthwith fortified by filial fondness followed her fathers footsteps, and flung her faultless form at the feet of the frightful figure who forgave the father, and fell flat on his face, for he had fervently fallen in a fiery fit of love for the fair Fenella. He feasted her till, fascinated by his faithfulness, she forgot the ferocity of face, form and features, and frankly and fondly fixed Friday, fifth of February, for the affair to come off. There was festivity, fragrance, finery, fire-works, fricased frogs, fritters, flesh, fish, fowl and fermentry, frontignac, flip and fare fit for the fastidious: fruit, fuss, flambeaux, four fat fiddlers and fifers; and the frightful form of the fortunate and frumpish fiend fell from him, and fell be at Fenella's feet a fair favored, fine frank freeman of the forest. Behold the fruits of filial affection.

THE WILL OF GOD.

Often think that the real value of whatever we do is proportioned by the conformity with which we do it to the will of God. If in merely eating or drinking, I do it because it is the will of God that I should, I am doing what is more agreeable to him than if I were to do what should even cost me my life, without any such Divine intention. I would advise you often, during the day, to beseech God that he would inspire you with a real love of your vocation, and that you should say, like St. Paul, when he was converted, 'Lord what wilt thou have me to do? Wouldst thou that I should serve thee in the lowest office in thy house? I will reckon myself here, too, blessed. Provided I serve thee I care not in what capacity. And coming more particularly to what is vexing you, say:—'Wouldest thou that I shouldest do such and such a thing? Alas! O Lord, though I am not worthy, willingly will I do it!'—St. Francis de Sales.

SELF-CONTROL.

A merchant in London had a dispute with a Quaker respecting the settlement of an account. The merchant was determined to bring the account into court, a proceeding which the Quaker earnestly deprecated, using every argument in his power to convince the merchant of his error; but the latter was inflexible. Desirous to make a last effort, the Quaker called at his house one morning, and inquired of the servant if his master was at home. The merchant hearing the inquiry, and knowing the voice, called out from the top of the stairs, 'Tell that rascal I am not at home.' The Quaker looking up to him, calmly said, 'Well, friend, God put thee in a better mind.' The merchant struck afterward with the meekness of the reply, and having more deliberately investigated the matter, became convinced that the Quaker was right, and that he was wrong. He requested to see him, and after acknowledging his error, he said: 'I have one question to ask you; how were you able, with such patience, on various occasions, to bear my abuse?' 'Friend,' replied the Quaker, 'I will tell thee; I was naturally as hot and violent as thou art. I knew that to indulge this temper was sinful; and I found it was imprudent. I observed that men in a passion always spake aloud; and I thought if I controlled my voice, I should repress my passion. I have, therefore, made it a rule never to let my voice rise above a certain key; and by a careful observance of this rule, I have, by the blessing of God, entirely mastered my natural temper.' The Quaker reasoned philosophically, and the merchant, as every one else may do, benefitted by his example.

ELEPHANT FROM PARIS.—A son of M. Fould, the Minister of State, has contrived to fall in love with Mdle. Valerie, an actress of the Theatre Francais, and as he could not accomplish his object on more forcible terms, he determined to marry her. For that purpose he has carried the lady off to London, and it is not known whether the parties are married or not. In the meantime the affair has been referred to the Duc deMalakoff, who will no doubt do all in his power to prevent the heir of the Jew Minister from becoming the husband of a Christian actress. As usual under the present regime in France, the papers under the penalty of suppression, not to allude to the mishap which desolates the hearth of the minister of State.

A Paris letter says:—'The scandal of M. Fould's son still is much talked of.

He has robbed his father, not of 700,000 francs, but of 1,600,000! M. Fould, the father, wrote to the Duc DeMalakoff, to use authority.' But Marshal Pellissier treated the whole affair as a French 'sub-lieutenant' might. He asked young Fould and Mdle. Valerie to breakfast; said pleasantly, 'Young people, I give you my blessing!' and wrote to the furious father that 'Young men were but young men, after all!'

THE WHITE SLAVES OF ENGLAND

The London Times says that young milliners and dress makers of that city are condemned to sixteen, seventeen or eighteen hours of toil out of the twenty-four in each day and night. Their work is carried on in crowded, unventilated rooms, where their frames are kept bent at their labor until their eyes ache and their limbs refuse to perform their duty. They have a short, painful life and an early grave. In a recent speech, Lord Shaftesbury said that many of these young women had been trained gently and tenderly, in delicate and happy homes, possessing all the virtues and tenderness that belong to the female sex, and rendered by those very characteristics more obedient, more unmurmuring, more slavishly subject to the authority and tyranny of those who are put over them. His lordship adds that they have no alternative between submission and the street door, and then asks, 'Is the condition of such a young woman one whit better than the most wretched slave in the Southern States of America?'

☞The city of New York has eight thousand grog shops. Gen. Cary says:

'There is no wisdom in the universe equal to the task of perfecting a 'police arrangement' which can afford protection to character, property or life, in a city with eight thousand drinking bells wide open. The machinery of civil government has never been, and will never be adequate to such a work. As well attempt to turn back Niagara with a pitchfork as expect a police force to prevent this mighty river of death from flowing onward, when eight thousand swollen and turpid tributaries pour their everlasting streams into the same channel Strong hopes have been entertained that the religious awakening, now so powerful in our cities, would result in arresting the tide of ruin. "Eight thousand" temples of Bacchus crowded with worshipers absolutely forbid that "righteousness should flow down the streets like a river and salvation like the waves of the sea."

THE CHURCH WHERE WASHINGTON WAS BAPTIZED.—The remains of the old church in which General Washington was baptized lie a few miles inland, and are almost entirely hid to the passer by with trees and undergrowth. A few veperable-looking oaks are probably the only living contemporaries of its erection. About this old church lie the remains of the Hon. Thomas Lee, and other great men of an earlier period. Nothing but broken bricks and old mortar heaped indiscriminately on all are their monuments. I have now one of the flags that paved the aisle, turned into a grind stone, purchased at an obscure sale, some years since. Tradition says the floor was torn up, as soon as it was abandoned by the parson, by the neighboring people, and used for various purposes.

AMES' GERMAN CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP.—We return our thanks to Mr. Thomas Gaskins for a bar of this invaluable article. We have heard this soap spoken of as being superior to any now used. Its advantages over all other kinds of soap may be learned by referring to the advertisements of Mr. Gaskins, in to-day's paper, and to which we invite particular attention.

CANDIDATES.—Joseph Medley, Esq., is the Democratic candidate for the Senate in the district composed of the counties of Anson and Union.

Geo. Green, Esq., for the Senate, and Messrs. H. C. Jones and Johnson H. Bryan, for the Commons, are the Democratic candidates in Craven county.

Chas. C. Clark, Esq., is an opposition candidate for the House of Commons from the same county.

☞ His Excellency Gov. BRAGG has recently been to Beaufort and New-Berne. He was present in the latter Town at the celebration on the 5th for the 4th of July. The Governor took his departure for Raleigh on Wednesday morning last, under escort of the "Newbern Light Infantry," in a train provided expressly for the occasion. The Union says that "the Company had a "big gun" along with them, and some three hundred cartridges, with which to enliven the trip."

☞ We were pleased to see our Senatorial nominee, Mr. Albertson, in our Town on Saturday last. He was on his way home, after a short visit to the mountains, whither he had gone to recruit his health; and returns now much improved, in fact quite restored, to enter upon the canvass in this Senatorial District. He meets his first appointment at Woodville to-day. We regret to learn that the health of his competitor, Mr. Pool, is such as to prevent his attendance—but suppose that some one will be there to represent him. Let him be who he may, we feel that our cause is in safe hands, and the best of them are welcome to all they can make out of JONATHAN W. ALBERTSON.

CAMDEN AND CURRITUCK.

We have the most cheering accounts from the Senatorial District composed of these two counties. C. C. Williams, the Democratic candidate, has made the rounds of the District, and we learn has every where produced the most favorable impression. The best informed gentlemen in that District assure us that Mr. Williams will be elected beyond peradventure; and that in his own county, (Camden,) where we have never been able to effect much, he will receive a much larger vote than was ever before given to a Democrat—a worthy tribute to his high position among those who know him best, and who appreciate his social virtues and honorable bearing as a citizen. In Currituck, the best possible feeling prevails, and that good old Democratic county will roll up her usual Democratic majority, if indeed she does not "mend her licks" a little. We understand the enthusiasm is up to fever heat within her borders. This feeling is greatly augmented by the fact that one of her favorite sons—the high-souled Baxter—is in the field as a candidate for the House of Commons from that county; and, though his election is not a matter of dispute, still his hosts of personal and political friends are warmed into enthusiasm by his candidacy. We look for a loud report from Currituck on election day.

EXCURSION.—The Steamer Curlew will go down the beautiful Pasquotank as far as Wade's Point light-house, to-morrow night, leaving the wharf at a quarter to eight o'clock. There will be music and dancing on board, and we advise all to go.

The 5th of July (celebrated as the 4th) was an occasion of unusual interest to the citizens of Virginia. The remains of one of her most eminent sons, President Monroe, had been disinterred at New York, where they had been buried for nearly thirty years, and were on that day deposited in Holywood Cemetery, Richmond, with the most solemn and imposing ceremonies. The 7th Regiment of New York Volunteers were awarded the honor of being a special escort, and the steamer Ericsson was detailed to convey the remains of the illustrious dead to their final resting place.—Besides this Regiment, a number of distinguished citizens of New York, accompanied the remains; and when the steamer arrived at her wharf in Richmond, thousands upon thousands of the citizens of the Capital were assembled there, besides the State and City authorities, and the military, to receive the remains of one of Virginia's most distinguished sons, and to welcome their guests—the guard of honor. The coffin was placed in a magnificent hearse, drawn by six milk-white horses, and the immense civic and military procession proceeded to Holywood Cemetery, where the ceremonies were concluded by a touching oration by Gov. Wise and a fervent prayer by Rev. Mr. Read.

That evening, the guests from New York were entertained in the most liberal and hospitable manner, and the next day started on their homeward journey.

Much to the amusement of the crowds gathered in the streets, a grotesque figure mounted on a grey charger—whose fleshless carcass showed him to be a stranger among corn piles and fodder stacks—appeared cantering through the streets, on Monday evening the 5th of July, followed by a throng of shouting white boys and jubilant negroes. One daring little darkey hung to the flowing extremity of the gallant steed, his open mouth exhibiting a couple of rows of bread cutters of which, had his steedship been conscious, would have quickened his pace, lest so formidable an apparatus should have deprived him of his fly whipper for the balance of his life.

The horseman was wrapped in a flowing robe of loose cottons yclept a sheet, and his shoulders were surmounted with a head that from its size might have belonged to him whom David slew. This gigantic appendage to a limited amount of frame beneath it rather troubled the wearer to keep it in its place, and we rather expected to see him lose his head without the use of axe or sword. His appearance seemed to enliven the day, and was a source of much laughter and merriment.

ARTHUR'S HOME MAGAZINE. The July number of this Magazine is on our table filled with more than its usual variety of useful and entertaining reading. The low price at which it is furnished,—$2,00 per annum—places it within the reach of all fond of light literature.

NORTH CAROLINA PLANTER. We are in receipt of this valuable agricultural Journal for July. Its articles are good, and calculated to effect much for the farming interests of the State.

PETERSON'S BANK NOTE DETECTOR. We have received this publication, and would recommend it to those in the habit of handling paper money; for ourself it is useless, rarely having an opportunity of detecting the genuine article about our premises.

LETTER FROM PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.—The following letter from the President was read at the democratic celebration in Independence square, Philadelphia, on Monday:

WASHINGTON, July 3, 1858.

Gentlemen: I have received your very kind invitation to be present at the meeting of my fellow-citizens in Independence square, to celebrate the approaching anniversary of our national independence.—Would that it were in my power to accept the invitation. This, however, is impossible. May we ever continue to celebrate, with ardent enthusiasm, throughout the length and breadth of the land, each successive return of the day which gave us birth as a nation. Whilst we do this, and thus keep alive, from generation to generation, the memory of the common sufferings and the common dangers which our fathers encountered in achieving our independence, the Constitution and the Union will be preserved.

I congratulate you, with all my heart, upon the present hopeful prospects of our country. I humbly trust that a kind Providence has dispelled the angry clouds which but recently seemed to impend over it, and that we have nearly reached the end of those violent and exasperated sectional controversies which have threatened the Union.

When we contrast the present condition of our country with what it would have been at this moment had Congress adjourned without enacting any law to mitigate the sectional strife which had been raging for years between the States of the Confederacy, we have every reason to be thankful to the Supreme Ruler of our nations, who has ever interfered at the hour of our greatest need to shield us from danger.

From your friend, very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

AFFRAY IN NASHVILLE.

We regret to learn that a very serious, if not fatal affray occurred in Nashville, on Friday evening last, in which that high-minded and peaceable citizen, A. J. Taylor, the Democratic candidate for Senator in Nash, and one or two others, received some severe injuries, and it was feared that Mr. Taylor's injuries would prove fatal. We have heard various rumors but we forbear expressing our opinion until we have gathered all the particulars, and then we will lay them before the people.

A similar affray occurred at Rocky Mount a short time since in which a young gentleman of high standing as a peaceable citizen was knocked down and, had it not been for the interference of others, would, perhaps, been killed.—Wilson Ledger.

THE MEXICAN NEWS.—The intelligence from Mexico, which we published on Monday, indicates a crisis in our relations with that Government, or rather with that country—for it can hardly be said to have a government—which has not been unexpected, and which may call for the prompt action of our Government. In the wretched and unsettled state of affairs in Mexico, extraordinary measures have been resorted to, for providing revenue, the most objectionable and arbitrary of which is the levying of a forced loan or contribution, to enable the leaders now exercising authority to meet the pressing demands upon them. This levy is made, indiscriminately, upon citizens and the people of other nations sojourning temporarily in that country, and on the promulgation of the decree, a protest was entered by Mr. Forsyth, our Minister, against so unjust a proceeding.

The Mexican authorities did not, however, regard this protest, and Mr. Forsyth, as we learn from the news telegraphed from New Orleans, has demanded and received his passports. We are therefore now without any Representative in Mexico, and the citizens of the United States sojourning there, have no protection against the uncertain and arbitrary demands of an irresponsible and precarious government.

We are not aware that the views of our Government upon the action of Mr. Forsyth, in his protest against the exercise of the arbitrary act to which we have referred, have been made known to the public. A reply was doubtless sent out to the U. S. minister in Mexico, but it is not probable that it could have been received before his relations with that Government were terminated. In the present unsettled state of affairs in Mexico, it is difficult for our Government to resort to the means of redress, which would be readily suggested as against a stable and de facto power. It must, however, in some way, take efficient measures to guarantee the safety of the life and property of Americans residing in that country, and to indicate in an emphatic manner the determination of this government to protect its citizens in all their just rights wherever they may temporarily abide.

There need be no apprehension in the public mind, with respect to the disposition of the U. S. Government to do its whole duty in this matter. The only embarrassment arises from having no fixed and determined authority in Mexico, with which to deal; but whatever course the exigencies of the case may demand, will be adopted with promptness, and prosecuted with energy.—N. Y. Jour. of Commerce.

OUTRAGE IN PORTSMOUTH.—On Sunday at the North Street Railroad wharf, Portsmouth, on the arrival of the steamer Powhatan from Washington, Mr. Edward Face threw a free negro man overboard, and before assistance could be rendered, he was drowned. Face was immediately arrested and committed to jail.

The body was recovered yesterday morning and an inquest held by acting Coroner A. R. Smith. Verdict of the jury:

"The deceased came to his death by drowning, having been deliberately thrown from the wharf by Mr. Edward Face."

Norfolk Herald.

FREE NEGROES.—The Grand Jury of Cleaveland County have made the following presentment:

'We, the Grand Jury of Cleaveland county, N. C., do present, that Free Negroes in general are a nuisance to society; and that it would be expedient to have a law requiring them to leave this State, and for a failure to do so, that they should be exposed to public sale, and the proceeds arising therefrom be applied to the Literary Fund of our State.' Adopted by unanimous consent.

THE MORMONS AND PEACE.—Hon. John M. Bernhisel, delegate to Congress from Utah, publishes an appeal to the public, in relation to the march of the army towards Salt Lake City. He declares that the Mormons' profession of a desire for peace is honest, and expresses a fear that the misstatements which he charges upon the press of the country will have the effect of prejudicing the public mind against the Saints. He adds a threat that war will yet ensue if the army persist in the pursuit of the Mormons.

FIRE.

Oxford Hall in Portsmouth, was burned down on the night of the 1st inst., together with the stores of J. B. Campbell, J. B. Newman, White and Culpepper and others. Loss about $30,000; mostly insured. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

We learn that this is the third time Mr. Newman has been burned out. He is a young man of great industry and perseverance, and will rise again.

THE GIRLS.—Mrs. Ellis thus hints at the deficiencies of English girls in household knowledge. The cap will fit some of our American young ladies: The truth is, my dear girls, you want, generally speaking, more liberty and less fashionable restraint; more kitchen and less parlor; more leg exercise and less sofa; more making bread and less piano; more frankness and less mock-modesty; more breakfast and less bustle.

SLEEP.—Women require more sleep than men, and farmers less than those engaged in any other occupation. Editors, reporters, printers, and telegraph operators need no sleep at all. Lawyers can sleep as much as they choose, and thus keep out of mischief.

NO WAR.—England has admitted that she has no right to search our merchant vessels, and we suppose will make reparation for past offenses. So that difficulty is settled. Where will the next breeze spring from?

☞ The Hon. Wm. R. Harris, who was scalded by the explosion of the steamer Pennsylvania died at Memphis on Saturday last. He was a Judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and a brother of Gov. Harris, of that State.

DEATH OF A VENERABLE MATRON.—Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, died on the 22d ult., in Durham, Me., at the advanced age of 115 years. Up to the age of 110 she used to work daily in her garden.

AN EXCITING TRIAL AT NEW ORLEANS.

INTERESTING DETAILS.

The trial of George W. Harby—an old and respected citizen of New Orleans, and a veteran teacher in the public schools for over quarter of a century—for the killing of Charles H. C. Stone, (a native of Virginia,) a young man of previously irreproachable character, and a junior member of one of the largest and most respectable mercantile houses of that city, took place on the 18th inst. The killing grew out of the charge that Stone had seduced the daughter of Harby, and then refused to marry her. The trial seems to have created intense excitement, and the court-room was thronged with an anxious multitude. The defense admitted the killing, but contended that, under the circumstances, it was justifiable. Mr. Durant, counsel for the accused, made the following interesting statement to the jury:

"Mr. Stone was introduced to the house of the prisoner by a gentleman whose word was a full guarantee for the respectability of his acquaintance. He was received with the warmth of heart natural to the prisoner, and it is a most painful circumstance in itself. He soon became a frequent visitor, and the watchful eyes of the parent soon discerned that his attentions were of that character which end in marriage where honor and love unite in mutual attachment. The father was not unwilling to observe the condition of things thus growing up, because he believed Mr. Stone to be honorable, and knew him to occupy a position where his exertions afforded him a respectable support. After a time the father ascertained that his daughter and Stone were engaged to be married, and that the event was only to be postponed until Mr. Stone should realize his expectation of being admitted as a partner in the highly respectable house of Dudley & Nelson, where he was clerk.—To this the parents, of course, made no objection, being rather pleased with the display of prudence which seemed to dictate the postponement. The confidence of the parents in Mr. Stone was ample and complete—they looked upon him as the future husband of their daughter, and as such they treated him. He visited her constantly; they attended church regularly together; they went unaccompanied to all places of public amusement—there was neither suspicion nor restraint.

"But now we approach a most affecting scene in this drama. The girl is taken ill, her sickness is not understood and cannot be accounted for; a physician in the neighborhood, a Doctor White, is called in to attend her; he no doubt perceived without much delay the real cause of her illness, though delicacy compelled him to refrain from communicating it to the parents.—Towards the end of November, of last year, the parents called on that eminent physician, Dr. Stone, who at once stated to the unhappy girl that he perceived her situation. She implored him, in agony, to conceal the matter from her father, which, I need not say, that honorable gentleman refused to do, but he was prevailed upon by her to defer the announcement for a brief period—until the next day. He then, accordingly, disclosed the dreadful secret to the parents. You may well imagine, gentlemen, although I cannot describe to you the dreadful scene, that took place:—the mother overwhelmed with mortification and confusion, the father cast down from the pinnacle of hope to the abyss of despair; the blow was too heavy for him; he could have borne all the ills that Heaven could inflict upon him in any shape but that; he had garnered up in that child all the riches of his heart, and a cruel thief had robbed him while he slept. Shame struggled with indignation in his bosom, and reason tottered on her throne. He pressed his daughter to a confession, and found that the man whom he had reared as a pride and cherished as a friend had treacherously stabbed his peace and ruined him forever. Yes, throwing herself at her father's feet, in guilty tears and penitent contrition, she confessed, with convulsive sobs and tears, that Charles Stone had seduced her. She saw in her father's countenance the dreadful purpose which had taken possession of his soul and overmastered all his judgment; she feared for the man who had wronged her, but whom she so fondly loved, and implored her father to grant but one day, that she might have one more interview with her lover, for she was confident, she said, he would do her justice. The father consented—he wrote to Stone in the language of affection, saying, Dear Charley, Caroline is very sick—come up and see her this evening—and he omitted all mention of the discovery he had made; all was calm, for he was too deeply touched to be clamorous.—Stone came in the evening. The father had him conducted to his daughter. His purpose was then settled. He armed himself. After Stone had been some half hour in his daughter's chamber, the father entered, a brace of loaded pistols on his person. He does not conceal his motives or design. He entered that room with the deliberate purpose of slaying the seducer of his child, not absolutely, not unconditionally, but provided he should refuse to make reparation by marrying. Surely it was an awful, an affecting scene: there lay the daughter stretched upon a bed of sickness—a fair flower trampled like the vilest weed—and by her bed side sat a man whom she had trusted, on whom she had lavished the rich treasures of her maiden love, and who had abused her fruit, and consigned her in this world to endless infamy. And there, too, was the father, calm and insensible. He humbled himself before the seducer of his child, he appealed to their ancient love, he invoked the sacred rights of friendship and of honor, imploring him not to bring ruin and disgrace upon his family, not to send down his gray hairs in sorrow to the grave, to have mercy upon them, to do them justice. Hearts are steel, and his merit must have been of harder substance to remain unmoved under such an appeal; he was touched by it, he rose from his seat and walked towards the mantel, leaned upon it; and said the old man, are you not the seducer of my child a guilty silence was his only answer: are you not, said the indignant voice of the parent, the father of the child she is about to bring forth? there was no reply; he looked at the old man, and saw a glance of wild excitement in his eye that made him quail and fall of voice; for God's sake, said he, Mr. Harby, commit no violence, and to morrow morning, at nine o'clock, I will make any reparation in my power. The crime was acknowledged and atonement promised. What, could the unhappy may slay the youth then? Impossible. His daughter lay in a precarious condition before him; must she see her lover die by her father's hand before her face? The thought rushes through his mind.—He promises reparation—it is all he can do; it is all I desire; but should I slay him now my child can never have reparation done her. So he said, you may go, Charley, but remember, so sure as God reigns in heaven you will incur a father's vengeance if you do not keep your promise.—He followed him down stairs; in descending Stone said again, to-morrow at nine o'clock, and as they shook hands at parting, for the father's hope was renewed, and his heart sat lightly again in his bosom, and he gave the youth his hand, as he was wont to do of old in friendship, and Stone said again, to-morrow at nine.

How anxiously the defendant waited for the appointed hour on the morrow. I need not tell you, it came and passed, but the seducer came not with it; it was some hours after the time that his brother, Mr. Joseph Stone, presented himself; the defendant expressed his surprise at the visit, and told him that it was the brother he had expected; Mr. S. made some evasive excuse for the absence of his brother, and asked to be admitted to see poor Caroline. He was admitted When he returned to the parlor there was more evasion, expression of condolence, of effected sympathy for the suffering girl, but he said he must see his brother again. He departed. The father saw that he was trifled with, and that Stone had deceived him as he had deceived his child. His purpose was fixed. He would be deceived and trifled with no longer.—He at once left home to seek the guilty seducer. I need not tell you his purpose. Had they met then, the event that brings you here to-day would have been anticipated. But Stone had escaped; he had left the city, and the father's search for him was in vain. His extreme mental excitement and suffering brought on an old disease of a debilitating character, which prostrated him on a bed of sickness. It is miserable to be weak, doing or suffering. On his bed of sickness his wife and daughter kneeled before him begging to forego his purpose, at least for a time. Let us fly from this city, said the mother, where we are disgraced and hide ourselves where we shall be unknown, and after the event that is to come shall happen, and Caroline becomes a mother, Stone's heart may then be touched with compassion, and he will do her justice. Weak, sick and dispirited, the father was prevailed upon. He left his hearth and altar-stone, abandoned the city where he had dwelt so many years in usefulness and peace, and on the eve of sixty years, started out in the wide world anew to seek another home."

The counsel continued, in an affecting strain, showing how the prisoner and his family arrived at St. Louis, in mid winter, friendless and poor, and unable to obtain employment. Soon they received a letter from their daughter, announcing the birth of her child. He returned to New Orleans, and found to his infinite horror, that shameful reports, which could have had but one origin, were in circulation to blast the reputation of his child, and to stamp her before the world not as the victim of seduction, but as herself a wanton. This was only wanting to make him desperate. His wrongs were becoming too heavy for him to bear. The daughter, however, attempted to pacify him. She wrote to Stone, appealing to him to fulfil his promise, but the letter was not answered. It was then that the father, driven to desperation, sought out the seducer and shot him dead.

Miss Caroline M. Harby, the daughter, who had been seduced, was among the witnesses on the trial. The Delta says:

When the name of Miss Harby was called as the next witness, there was a general move in the Court, and a tiptoeing of those behind to obtain the first glimpse of the lady. A few minutes elasped, and the bolt of the middle door shot back, and Miss Harby, closely veiled, entered, leaning upon the arm of Captain Fremaux. She walked falteringly to the witnesses' chair and took her seat.—At the solicitation of the Attorney General, her heavy brown veil was raised, leaving only the black lace, through which the features were plainly discernible. Her face is beautiful, and the piercing black eyes fairly sparkled as she encountered the gaze of the gaping multitude of men before her. Her voice has that silvery tone which is so calculated to please—neither too soft nor too harsh. She expressed herself, when not agitated, clearly and firmly, using the most chaste and elegant language.

Upon being asked by Mr. Durant, in a manner as decorous as the case would allow. If Stone had not seduced her, and if he was not the father of her child, her firmness deserted her. She bowed over the arm of the chair and cried and sobbed bitterly. Her father also gave way, and the feeling spread among the spectators, jurors, everybody. We never saw so much silent weeping in any crowded assembly as there was on this occasion, whilst the father and daughter sobbed together. The scene lasted several minutes.

The main points of her testimony are embraced in the remarks of Mr. Durant. She swore positively to the seduction, and Stone's promise to marry her, and his subsequent refusal to comply with his promise. The following touching letter, written to the brother of her seducer, was produced as evidence:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 13, 1857.

Mr. Joseph Stone—Dear Sir:—I arrived in this large city this afternoon and according to promise inform you of it. I am as well as can be expected, under the circumstances I labor under. Father has taken board for us in a private boarding house for a few days. To-morrow will be Monday, when he intends to look for employment in the public schools, or do anything to support his family, should he succeed in doing anything, he will hire a house, and will live alone and retired. I am sorry to say that father and mother are very melancholy and silent, not a word has escaped their lips concerning the unfortunate events which drove them from a home, from friends, and from their support and livelihood. O, God, how I feel for them; but how dare I offer comfort—I who am the cause of their grief, and poverty. I know they sympathize with me; and, though I am undeserving, they love me still. Oh, if Charley could see their grief, and know my love for him, how his heart would grieve. Embrace your brother for me, and say that while I live no one but him will possess my affections and my true love.

Yours, with respect and regard,

[Signed] C. R. HARBY.

The prosecution having introduced two witnesses who swore that they had had criminal intercourse with Miss Harby, and that she had asked Stone for money, she was recalled to the stand.—She mounted the steps firmly, and instead of seating herself, stood up, raised her right hand, and in a clear, loud voice, which fell with electric force upon the breathless assemblage, said:

"Before Almighty God, and by all my hopes hereafter, I do solemnly swear, that what those men have sworn about me is false—false—false—[stamping her foot.] If ten thousand lives depended on it, it is all false. I don't see how any man could come here and talk that way about me before my father and'—

Here she fell in the chair, and gave way to a hysterical fit of weeping and sobbing. The court was fairly stunned by her vehemence, and the dramatic force of the scene. Upon recovering herself Miss Harby stated that it was false that she had ever asked Joseph Stone for money. He had professed great sorrow for her distresses, and had offered the money to her, and insisted on her taking it. She had written him notes to come and see her, but she had never asked him for money. She never had criminal intercourse with any one but Charles Stone.

After the charge of the Judge the jury retired at about half-past five. In about fifteen minutes they returned, and wished to be charged upon certain points, or rather, whether if the accused had committed murder, could any circumstances palliate it. After some delay the Court again charged them, and they retired.

They returned almost immediately into court, and upon answering to their names, they rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty."

The crowd in the court-room, which was now densely packed, burst forth into one roar of approbation, and rushed towards the prisoner to congratulate him. In vain the deputy sheriffs called order and rushed in among the crowd; but it was not until Mr. Durant, standing upon a chair, asked, for the sake of Mr. Harby, to keep quiet, that a little order was established. After Mr. Harby was duly discharged, the crowd rushed out to see him. He was taken into the clerk's office, and after the crowd had rushed into St. Anne street, he was led quietly out, and placed in a carriage and driven off. As he passed down St. Anne street, the crowd greeted him with shouts. The old gentleman waved his hat. The daughter, who had been remaining in an outer office during the whole trial was taken away in a carriage by some friends.

NOBLE CONDUCT.—During the crisis of last fall, Messrs. West & Caldwell, dealers in dry goods used in the hat and cap business, at 52 Broadway, were compelled to suspend. They forthwith called a meeting of their creditors, and laid a statement of their affairs before them. A committee was appointed, who, after a thorough investigation, unanimously recommended that the creditors accept fifty cents on a dollar. This was with like unanimity acceded to, and the whole matter was closed, and the firm discharged. On the first day of July instant, the creditors each received a printed circular, stating that the assets had turned out much better than there was reason to expect when the compromise was made, and that enclosed would be found a check for the full balance and interest.—The checks were all found as stated, and amounted in the aggregate to over $36,000, not one cent of which were they under any legal obligation to pay. We would rather have the consciousness of this act, with the letters of hearty acknowledgment that came showering in upon Messrs. West & Caldwell, in response to their circular, than to receive $36,000 multiplied by ten.—One of the creditors (a leading firm) informed them that they had taken the liberty to have the circular framed and hung up in their office. Blessed and refreshing in these degenerate days, are such instances of high and honorable fidelity to the right.

Evening Post.

COWARDLY.

We learn, says the Standard of Wednesday last, that Mr. Nicholas W. Arrington, of Nash was most cruelly set upon and beaten in Richmond, Va., on Friday last, by a gang of ruffians and desperadoes. Mr. Arrington, it seems, had won largely upon the cock-fights which had taken place between himself and some of the sporting men assembled in Richmond; and some expressions of his, by no means insulting because no doubt uttered by him in jest, were seized upon by these ruffians as a pretext for their work of assassination. At the last accounts he was in a most critical condition. Several of the ruffians who assailed him have been arrested. A couple only of his friends were with him at the time. One of them was knocked down and disabled before Mr. A. was struck, and the other seeing that his life was in great danger, made his escape. Mr. Arrington's servant came up just as his master was knocked down, and as Mr. A. fell his pocket-book, containing a large amount of money, dropped at the boy's feet. He snatched it up and ran, and after the fight was over and the ruffians were arrested or had left, he came in and delivered the pocket-book, with the money, to his master.

☞ We think it is hardly known even to the most intelligent of our readers, how deep some of the sciences are looking down into the mysteries of creation. We knew there were wonderful discoveries in these times, and wonderful uses made of them, but did not know the Chemists were imitating in their crucibles and even surpassing the most wonderful productions of organic life. During our visit to Lowell we were introduced by one of the prominent citizens to the laboratory of DR. AYER, (inventor of Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills,) where we were shown with generous frankness, his processes and his products. This master genius of his art is manufacturing the subtil essences of flowers from tar and other vegetable substances. His essence of Pine Apple, Strawberry, Checkerberry, Quince, Pear, Canella, Cinnamon, &c., not only equal but they exceed in purity of flavor, those vegetables themselves. His oil of Winter-green is purer and of better flavor than any that can be gathered from the plant—and yet is made by chemical composition from the Hydro carbons in tar! His process is, to analyze the substance and find the exact ultimate atoms of which it is made, then recompose them in the same proportions which exist in nature.—Christian Advocate.

A CURIOUS FACT.

It may be altogether accidental, perhaps it is—that the present movement of the Republicans is being opened and carried on chiefly by southern know-nothings. The tendency, Mr. Bell, Mr. Humphrey Marshall, Mr. Winter Davis are the courriers of the new party. They are apparently permitted to fix the creed, frame the ritual, and preach the first sermon of the new church. We beg pardon, but we suggest that the wily Republicans have made use of these men to pull the chestnuts out of the fire. If the coals are getting pretty well, they are strong enough to come in late, to fix the whole affair in their own latitudes, having the benefit of committing their southern allies to any possible retraction. Meantime we congratulate the country that we have at least of having a party enough to enable it to get up a ticket in two or three States of the Union. If the Republicans have got no more than Abolitionism, we are free to say that Democracy will not quarrel with their conclusions in this respect.

HOW THURLOW WEED GOT $8000, AND HOW MILLARD FILLMORE'S WIFE GOT—

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger tells the following story: About three years ago the railway line between Albany and Buffalo were consolidated under the title of the New York Central. Thurlow Weed, of the Albany Journal, engineered the matter. In the matter through the Legislature the service was to receive the handsome sum of $8,000, of which Erastus Corning was to furnish $4,000 and Dean Richmond the balance. The plan succeeded and the money was paid over. But as Mr. Weed thought it would look well to have the money in his own name, he made it over to Millard Fillmore and particular friend of his—Mr. McIntosh—who had made money as a contractor. It was understood by the parties that McIntosh was to hold the money and then quietly make it over to Mr. Fillmore. But unluckily, McIntosh died, and failed to leave a will. So the administrator, in making up the account of the estate, dabbled upon the certificates for the $8,000, and put them down to McIntosh, supposing, of course, they were his. The debts were paid and a handsome sum was left for the widow, the attractive Mrs. McIntosh, who was married a few years ago to Mr. ex-President Fillmore. Mr. Fillmore's eight thousand dollars went with the widow, into the arms of the man whom Thurlow Weed, of the Albany Journal, engineered

TWO VALUABLE FARMS FOR SALE

WISHING TO STOP FARMING, I offer for sale my two farms, "Wood lawn" and "Cumberland." The farm I live upon is situated on Perquimans river, in Harvey's Neck, and is in a fine state of cultivation, well adapted to the growth of Corn, Wheat and Cotton; has on it a good DWELLING and every necessary out-building. There is about THREE HUNDRED acres cleared, and a deading of One Hundred and Twenty-Five Acres, nearly all ditched and ready to come in. There is between eight and nine hundred acres of LAND attached to the farm; the portion not cleared is well set in pine, oak, gum, hickory, &c. I deem it unnecessary to say any more—those wishing to purchase a good and convenient farm will do well to come and examine the premises.

The other Farm is situated on the North side of Perquimans river, about four miles from Hertford, on the road recently cut through to Elizabeth City. There is about one hundred and fifty acres cleared, and a deading of about twenty acres, all ditched and ready to come in. This farm contains between two and three hundred acres, and will yield as much Corn as any land in the county. The buildings are not very good, but comfortable. I will also sell stock and farming utensils on the farms.

A liberal credit will be given. Come and see.

BALTIMORE LOCK HOSPITAL.
DOCTOR JOHNSTON,

THE founder of this Celebrated Institution, offers the most certain, speedy, and only effectual remedy in the world for Gleets, Strictures, Seminal weakness, Pains in the Loins, Constitutional Debility, Impotency, Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin; and all those serious and melancholy Disorders arising from the destructive habits of Youth, which destroy both body and mind. These secret and solitary practices are more fatal to their victims than the song of the Syrens to the mariners Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes of anticipations, rendering marriage, &c., impossible.

YOUNG MEN

especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Vice, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellects, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstacy the living lyre, may call with all confidence.

Marriage.

Married persons, or Young Men contemplating marriage, being aware of physical weakness, organic debility, deformities, &c., should immediately consult Dr. Johnston, and be restored to perfect health.

He who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston, may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a Physician.

Organic Weakness

immediately cured and full vigor restored.

This disease is the penalty most frequently paid by those who have become the victims of improper indulgencies. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue.—Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of Procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms to both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged; the physical and mental powers weakened, nervous debility, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, a wasting of the frame, cough, symptoms of consumption, &c.

OFFICE—No. 7, South Frederick Street, Seven Doors from Baltimore St., East side, up the steps. ☞ Be particular in observing the name and number, or you will mistake the place.

A Cure Warranted, or no Charge Made, in from One to Two Days.

NO MERCURY OR NAUSEOUS DRUGS USED.
DR. JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended, sometimes, with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

A Certain Disease.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commiseration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings, by sending him to that bourne from whence no traveler returns. To such therefore Dr. Johnston pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secrecy, and from his extensive practice in the first Hospitals of Europe and America, he can confidently recommend a safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid disease.

It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fall victims to this dreadful disease, owing to the unskillfulness of ignorant pretenders, who, by the use of that dreadful poison, mercury, ruin the constitution, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the residue of his life miserable.

Take Particular Notice!

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgencies and solitary habits which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either Business, Study, Society or Marriage.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz:—Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c.

MENTALLY—The fearful effects upon the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, Confusion of ideas, Depression of Spirits, Forebodings of Evil, Aversion of Society, Self-Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, etc., are some of the evils produced.

Thousands of persons of all ages can now judge what is the cause of their declining health. Losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, cough and symptoms of consumption.

Dr. Johnston's Invigorating Remedy for Organic Weakness.

By this great and important remedy, weakness of the organs are speedily cured, and full vigor restored. Thousands of the most nervous and debilitated, who had lost all hope, have been immediately relieved. All impediments to Marriage, Physical or Mental Disqualification, Nervous Irritability, Tremblings and Weakness, or exhaustion of the most fearful kind, speedily cured by Doctor Johnston.

Young Men,

Who have injured themselves by a Certain Practice, indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school—the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, and the darling of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life, by the consequences of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit. Such persons before contemplating should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed, without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage, the prospects hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.

AGRICULTURAL.

'YOUNG AMERICA' CORN AND COB MILL,
MANUFACTURED BY
S. MARCH, Norfolk, Va.

THE above Mill, which so far surpassed all others last season, has been improved, and made stronger and better than ever, and is now in the field carrying everything before it. It is the mill for strength, durability and swiftness.

I annex a list of premiums it has received this season, over the 'Little Giant,' 'Magic Mill,' Star Mill, Maynard's Mill, and all others that have come into competition with it:

First premium at the N. York State Fair.
First premium at the Ohio State Fair.
First premium at the Michigan State Fair.
First premium at the N. Carolina State Fair.
First premium at the Nashville (Tenn.) Fair.
First premium at one County Fair in N. York.
First premium at ten County Fairs in Ohio.
Trial of corn and cob mills at the North Carolina State Fair, October 1856.

The following table will show the time occupied by each of the Mills on exhibition in grinding half bushel of corn and cobs:

Young America, 2 minutes and 40 seconds.
Little Giant, 4 " 55 "
Magic Mill, 6 " "
Sinclair & Co's Mill, two trials, average time, 6 minutes and 58 seconds.

Advantages of the Young America or Excelsior Mill over all others: 1st, great strength and durability; 2d, simplicity, (having but one set screw to graduate the quality of grinding, which renders it so simple that it may be managed by any ordinary farm hand;) 3d, it will grind more corn, or corn and cob, in the same time, and to same quality, than any other mill in use of the same size; 4th, economy—that part of the mill which is most liable to wear, being separate from the main body of the machine, can be renewed when worn out, at the small cost of $3. Thus in the Young America or Excelsior mill, I present the best, cheapest and most durable mill ever offered to the Farmer. This mill is of large size and greater capacity than any other mill ever sold at the same price

Price, including extra plates, $50.

I am also manufacturing Cart and Wagon Wheels, Farm Wagons, Carts, Trucks, Drays, Plows, Harrows, Cultivators, Corn Shellers, and Agricultural Implements generally, and am better prepared to furnish farmers and merchants than any other house in the city.

Call and examine my stock and be convinced that it is to your interest to patronize Southern enterprize. I am unwilling to believe that all the men in Virginia and North Carolina prefer to build up the North and impoverish the South.

I have also a Foundry connected with my factory, and solicit orders for Castings generally.

We need not speak to the public of the virtues of this Throughout every town, and almost every family in the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Many families in any civilized country within the circle of their acquaintance can point out some personal experience of its efficacy, or know in the communities any where which have not been made glad by some living trophy of its victory over the fell destroyer. No other remedy has ever been known to the afflicted, so completely controlled the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. Which is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the inevitable hour when croup and whooping cough demand its instant use. Singers and public speakers believe the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives from consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Do not neglect a cough, a cold, or hoarseness in yourself or those around you, and cure your colds while they are curable. Do not neglect them until no human skill can reach the
